DAYTON, Ohio, January 11, 1972 --- The ancient art of cooking--international style--the know-how in real estate law for the homeowner, and the development of reading skills are the diverse programs for the University of Dayton's Special Sessions Department during January. All three courses start at the end of the month on UD's main campus.

The six-week course, International Cookery, begins Monday, January 24, and runs six Monday sessions from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. each night. Instructed by Mrs. Lenore Greenstein of UD's Home Economics Department and Foods Editor of the Dayton Journal Herald, the course is an introduction to gourmet cooking as applied to different cuisines. The course content will include Food of France, Japanese Cookery, Middle Eastern Foods, Art of Irish Cooking, Greek Cookery and Mexican, South American and Caribbean delicacies. The course will be conducted in the Home Economics Department's food and cooking laboratories.

The program will be accomplished through lectures and demonstrations which will show the effect of culture on food patterns and preparation. Participants will serve as samplers and evaluators of the various recipes.

Both the Real Estate Law and the Reading Improvement courses will begin on Tuesday, January 25, in the Kennedy Union. The reading program, in its 21st year at UD, will be conducted every Tuesday and Thursday for 16 sessions in Kennedy room 331. The course, which runs from 7 p.m. to 8:15 p.m. each night, will be taught by Dr. Collier Powell, who started the reading speed and comprehension program at UD in 1950.

Mr. James E. Cross, who has law offices in the Talbott Tower, is the instructor for the homeowner and investor's course on Real Estate Law. This program will be held in Kennedy room 312 from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. each Tuesday evening for eight sessions. Its content will include acquisition and sales, title problems, conveyancing, landlord and tenant, and mechanics' liens, easements and other pertinent areas which make law more readily understandable.

Course fee for International Cookery is $35, reading improvement is $60 and Real Estate Law $25 a person; $40 per couple.
